Lalit Suryawanshi

Lalit is an accomplished digital transformation professional with an INSEAD MBA. He has held leadership roles in both startup and fortune/FTSE listed companies across diverse sectors, including health, retail, logistics, and airlines.

As the co-founder of Itechohealth, he played a pivotal role in architecting Ascelus, a highly configurable digital health platform that has revolutionized healthcare by significantly reducing face-to-face appointments, particularly for long-term condition patients. Throughout his career, Lalit has demonstrated an entrepreneurial mindset and served as a board member, bringing extensive expertise in software engineering, business change, IT management, and operations. His track record includes successful digital platform creation for prominent companies like Hermes, Asda, Walmart, Howdens Joinery, QVC, Air Canada, and Wilko.

Lalit's leadership has led to tangible outcomes, such as driving revenue growth, achieving high user adoption rates, and spearheading numerous successful digital transformations. His ability to deliver results and lead teams sets him apart as a seasoned executive with a clear vision for the future.
